Practice What We Teach

In his book, "What the Best Colleges Instructors Do," Ken Bain writes, "Fundamentally, they [the best instructors] were learners, constantly trying to improve their own efforts to foster students' development, and never completely satisfied with what they had already achieved." In their quest for student success, they might experiment with multiple approaches to teaching a concept to find the most significant impact on student learning. Similar to this, educators can experiment to determine the most effective methods for fostering cooperative learning, peer review, or authentic assessments for students. This Faculty Development Day is an opportunity for you to share your best ideas. Explore and share practical, evidence-based best practices on pedagogical themes in a collaborative setting and acquire new understanding as you are equipped and inspired to attempt new things in your courses.
